Unit III

5. Read the following passage and answer the questions given below : 20

The real crisis of our times is the crisis in management. I believe that the solutions to our problems lie in the development of the art and practice of management at all levels and in all facets of our national activities—from a small (bhat's) teashop to the multifaceted international organisation or the huge national government administration. I also believe that application of better and sound management skills and methods is of vital importance in resolving many huge and buffering economic and social problems that are beyond the reach of either government or business-acting.

I strongly believe that the private sector can contribute something far more important than even money, that is management management raised to a whole new order of magnitude in the attainment of the social and economic objectives put forward by our government.

“But how do we do it ?” The answer lies in developing a deeper sense of social responsibility on the part of our men in management. Management must act in concert with a broad social interest and serve the objectives of the society. The various socio-economic measures now being taken in the fields of licensing, price regulation and distribution of essential communities etc. will not lead us towards attainment of social objectives unless we ensure that the benefits of these measures go to the ultimate consumer—the common man. This is possible only through right management, proper understanding and of course, above all, through co-operation among all concerned.

Indian management has skills, know-how and capacity to cope with new challenges. We must make a start now. The opportunities are there if we will but see them, and see them quickly.

- (1) In what sense is the crisis of our times the crisis in management ?
- (2) What contribution does the private sector make towards to attainment of economic objectives ?
- (3) What does Indian management lack ?
- (4) How can we ensure that the common man gets the benefits of various socio-economic measures ?
- (5) What does Indian management have ?
